

CIVIL ENGINEERING

PALACE ACQUIRE PROGRAM (PAQ)

COMBAT POWER STARTS HERE

Air Force Civil Engineers (CEs) are responsible for the planning, operation, maintenance, construction management, environmental, and engineering of the Air Force's largest weapon system – its installations.

CE civilians are critical members of our team, providing the diverse expertise and leadership needed to secure our nation's defense.

THE PAQ PROGRAM

Ready for a challenge? The PAQ Program offers either a two-year or three-year developmental and rotational program for recent graduates that will expose you to every aspect of Air Force Civil Engineering.

We are seeking recent undergraduate and graduate students who have recently completed their degree or are in their final semester to be trained in the CE disciplines. The Air Force Civil Engineering Career Field encompasses a variety of occupations beyond traditional engineering, including architects, environmental professionals, biologists, planners, and more.

During a PAQ Internship, you will work shoulder to shoulder with current AFCS Civilian Engineers on challenging and rewarding projects, where you will make real contributions and gain invaluable experience.

This is a development program with annual promotions where yearly salary increases are granted based upon performance and supervisory approval. Upon successful completion of the program, the PALACE Acquire Program offers a permanent position at AFCS, making it a great way to start your professional life.

SECURITY SPECIALIST

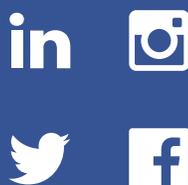

PALACE ACQUIRE PROGRAM (PAQ)

We are seeking current undergraduate and graduate students who will be completing a degree during the current semester or recent graduates (within two years of completing degree) to be trained as civilian Security Specialists. There are over 2,500 civilian Security Specialists working within the Air Force, and they can be found at almost every installation, ensuring all personnel, facilities, and classified information are properly protected. This internship will focus on information protection and safeguarding vital assets from theft, loss, misuse, fraud, disclosure, espionage, and sabotage.

During a PAQ Internship, you will work shoulder to shoulder with senior Security Specialists and other Air Force Civilian Service (AFCS) personnel on challenging and rewarding projects, where you will make real contributions and gain invaluable real-world experience.

This is a development program where promotions and yearly salary increases are granted based upon performance and supervisory approval. Upon successful completion of the formal training plan, the PALACE Acquire Program offers a permanent position at AFCS, making it a great way to start your professional life.

ACQUISITION PROGRAM MANAGEMENT

PALACE ACQUIRE (PAQ) PROGRAM

Acquisitions are the process in which the Department of Defense (DoD) competes with our foreign adversaries to deliver the latest/greatest technology to our military customers. Any time the government wants to buy new or existing technologies (aircraft, software, satellites, etc.), they must initiate an Acquisition Program. The person who manages the program is known as an Acquisition Program Manager (PM).

Program Managers ensure that all stakeholders involved in producing the specific product are synchronized in their planning and execution of the process. The PM's focus is the cost, schedule, and performance of all program aspects. The PM leads a team of Acquisition professionals (from across multiple career fields) and has the authority to make final decisions. The duties of a PM include determining program resources and plans, monitoring progress and performance, and leading team meetings. The PM is ultimately responsible for the program from cradle to grave, and their leadership skills are vital to the team's success.

We are seeking undergraduate and graduate students who have recently completed their degree or are in their final semester to be trained in business-related disciplines. The Air Force Acquisition Program Management Career Field encompasses management of a variety of Air Force missions that include areas such as developing new weapons systems, performing platform-specific oversight and maintenance, and providing services acquisition and support for the worldwide program.
